

Commuter Information

As a commuter retreatant, you are encouraged to participate fully in your program and take advantage of all the resources the Garrison Institute has to offer. Your registration includes the cost of your program, as well as all meals during the retreat.

Commuter retreatants must arrange for their own offsite accommodations during their program, as well as transportation to and from the Garrison Institute each day. We typically recommend that commuters plan to have access to a car throughout their program, as our area can be difficult to navigate without one. The Metro-North Railroad provides service between Garrison, Cold Spring, and Beacon, but there are very few hotels within walking distance of the train, and the Garrison Institute is a twenty-minute walk through the woods from the Garrison train station. While taxi and ridesharing services are available, we do not recommend that commuter retreatants rely on those services for their daily transportation needs.

There are a number of hotels and inns in our local area. Below, we have included some brief information on various options for offsite accommodations. For availability and rates, please contact these hotels directly.
